monitoring. They participate in research studies, experience the consequences of their diseases and treatments, and pay the bills. But how do we engage the public on research and health care issues?

Speaker: Dr. Andreas Laupacis has recently completed a project to identify the top ten research priorities from the perspective of the dialysis patients and their caregivers. He is also the lead editor of www.healthydebate.ca, a website with the aim to engage the public in dialogue and debate about our health care system. Dr. Laupacis will describe these two projects, and reflect upon lessons learned about patient and public involvement in health research.
